The Staffing 100, now in its ninth year, honors leaders that create new models of work, drive efficiencies while running companies, influence legislation and introduce technologies that provide engaging experiences for clients and job seekers. Clark and Saville are now members of an elite group, and among some of the most visionary leaders in the workforce solutions sector.

"I am proud to be included on the Staffing 100 list this year alongside my colleague Steve Saville," says Clark. "Having co-founded Cross Country Healthcare and returning as its CEO nearly three decades later has been the most rewarding part of my career. Helping our clients deliver exceptional patient care by supplying the most qualified job seekers is at the core of what we do. I am honored to be at the helm of this industry-leading organization."

Clark co-founded Cross Country Healthcare, Inc. in 1986 and sold it in the early 1990s, returning to the helm in early 2019. Cross Country Healthcare is one of only two publicly traded US healthcare workforce solutions firms, and Clark came back as leader of the company to improve its performance. Since his return, the company has consolidated 24 brands into one cohesive brand centered around "Cross Country," simplified the organizational structure and is executing a digital transformation. The company remains committed to its reputation as a leader in clinical excellence.

"I sincerely appreciate being recognized alongside such esteemed peers," says Saville. "I am grateful for all the efforts of Cross Country Healthcare associates who are executing on strategic and operational initiatives across the organization. The resulting improvements in our financial and operational performance furthers our ability to make a difference in the lives of our candidates, internal staff and valued clients."
